

The Meadowlands Blog

A celebration and exploration of the natural wonders in North Jersey's 30.4-square-mile Meadowlands District

Meadowblog.net features natural destinations and events in the Meadowlands. Log on each day to see what's happening. Talented photographers share stunning color images that chronicle local nature – from birds and butterflies to flowers and fauna.

Stay updated on our free nature walks hosted by NJSEA and Bergen County Audubon Society. Walks take place at sights like Mill Creek Marsh, Harrier Meadow, Laurel Hill Park and more!

Daily posts alert you to rare bird sightings and upcoming events. During the warmer months join one of our many pontoon boat tours and canoe trips.

With stunning color images from talented local photographers, the blog also links to major local nature groups.

Also publicized, are events and the open viewing schedule at the William D. McDowell Observatory in DeKorte Park in Lyndhurst.

Log on to meadowblog.net and experience nature in the Meadowlands.